AUGUST 3, 2015

In a July 16 statement, TLC said the Duggars have "sparked a critical and important conversation about child protection."

DUGGARS GET DUMPED

TLC has turned off 19 Kids and Counting for good. Two months after a police report revealed that eldest son Josh Duggar, 27, molested five underage girls (including sisters Jill Dillard, 24, and Jessa Seewald, 22) between 2002 and 2003, the network has canceled his family's series. "We spent the past month and a half in thoughtful consideration," TLC group president Marjorie Kaplan said July 16 of the decision to ax the network's highest-rated show, with 3 million-plus viewers weekly, and take all reruns off the air. "It's no secret that 19 Kids and Counting was a really, really hit show. But we have some other great shows." Since May, the Arkansas-based clan has been relentless in its support of the dad of three (wife Anna is due this month with the couple's fourth child). And now the family, who has welcomed fans into its home since 2008, is giving thanks. "We love each of you," patriarch Jim Bob and wife Michelle said in a statement, "and look forward to unfolding the future with peace and joy." PREACH Count on seeing the conservative brood again soon. In late August, TLC will air an hourlong documentary highlighting survivors of abuse. Set to appear: six-months-pregnant Seewald, and Dillard, who is abroad on a mission trip with husband Derick and 3-month-old son Israel. Add the parents of the 19, "It is our prayer that the painful situation our family went through many years ago can... help others."

REALLY?!

» Olivia Munn hit the couch to shape up. After telling a hypnotist that she "didn't work out," the 35-year-old (who dates NFL star Aaron Rodgers) was put in a trance during one Friday appointment. The result: "By Monday, I was working out every day at 6 A.M.," claims the actress. "Now I feel so much stronger." According to psychologist Sherrie Campbell, the mind trick isn't as crazy as it sounds: "It is just used to shift a person's perception."

"If I missed a [workout], I'd double up," Munn tells Good Housekeeping.

FEUD OF THE WEEK

★★★★ BRAD VS COSTCO ★★★★★

Costco has really ruffled Brad Pitt's feathers. The 51-year-old actor penned a letter to the warehouse retailer July 16 urging execs to fulfill their plan to stop selling eggs from caged hens. "These birds producing eggs for your shelves are crammed five or more into cages that are not large enough for even one hen to spread her wings," he wrote. "Animals deserve better." An insider credits another famous face for Pitt's call to action. Explains the source, "Ryan Gosling encouraged him to join the cause while filming The Big Short."

KELLY RIPA

"Wow Kelly makes me feel some type of way. No disrespect I know she's married! #bigcrush."

BIEBER'S BABES

Crushing it? Justin Bieber, 21, is hungry for these ladies' love

BEYONCÉ

"She's so sexy. I'm in love with everything about her. But I love Jay Z, so I can't do anything about it."

DANIELLE KNUDSON

"Who is this Guess Model. She's Stunning."

SCARLETT JOHANSSON

"Scarlett Johansson is soooo awesome."

EMMA WATSON

"It would be great if she could come to one of my concerts, then we could hang out afterward."

CHERYL COLE & KATY PERRY

"I would like to invite the two of them out for dinner so they can tell me the best way to win a woman like them."

KIM KARDASHIAN

"Beyond just being, like, extremely hot, she's actually, you know, a really nice person."

KRIS JENNER

"Who's your daddy?"

Alan Jackson

25 Things You Don't Know About Me

The country singer, 56, fills Us in

1. I once sang "Respect" with Aretha Franklin and Whitney Houston.
2. I've performed for the past four U.S. presidents.
3. My first performance was in a second grade assembly program.
4. I played Barnaby in my high school's production of Sing Out, Sweet Land.

5. Growing up, I had a pet squirrel monkey.

6. I love classic reruns on TV Land.
7. I drove a forklift at the Kmart warehouse in Newnan, Georgia, before moving to Nashville.
8. I started wearing a hat to cover up a scar on my forehead.
9. Our 4-pound Yorkie, Coco, sleeps at the foot of our bed in a pink dog bed.

10. I hate kale and brussels sprouts but love turnip greens.

11. I'm a member of the Andy Griffith Show Rerun Watchers Club.
12. My first band was named Dixie Steel after a box of nails on the floor.
13. I jumped a monster truck over six cars in my "Who's Cheatin' Who" music video.
14. I have my private pilot's license.
15. I was 20 when I went to my first concert.

16. I'm a Weather Channel junkie.

17. I can wiggle my ears.
18. I've always loved to play practical jokes.
19. My first job, at age 12, was in a shoe repair shop.
20. The first time I flew in a plane, I was 26.
21. My greatest passion is restoring antique cars.
22. I am never without Blue Plate mayonnaise when I'm on tour.
23. I can whistle like an ambulance siren.
24. I make good cornbread from scratch.
25. Dale Earnhardt once drove me from an airport in the Bahamas to my boat.

Jackson's new album, Angels and Alcohol, is out now.

Meeting His Parents!

Harris will bring Swift home to Mum and Dad

Calvin Harris feels close to Taylor Swift. So close, in fact, that the Scottish DJ, 31, is ready to introduce her to his family after four months of dating.

"They're planning a trip to the U.K. with a few days in the countryside so she can meet his parents," says an insider. Harris has already won over the 25-year-old's folks. "Her parents love him," a source says of the EDM star, who palled around with her dad, Scott, at the singer's 1989 concert in Chicago July 19. "They think he's the greatest." And in his eyes, she's just as perfect. When asked about their relationship July 17, he told Britain's KISS FM that it's "absolutely fantastic," adding he's "insanely happy." It's a feeling they're both hoping to hold on to for as long as they can. Says the source, "This is the real thing."

REAL HOUSEWIVES

A Reunion Smackdown

Don't cross the countess! Real Housewives of New York City's Luann de Lesseps almost got physical with costar Carole Radziwill during the series' season 7 reunion taping July 7, sources reveal. The fight started when she accused Radziwill, 51, of stealing her niece's boyfriend, Adam Kenworthy. After Radziwill reminded de Lesseps about the countess' romp with a married man during their Turks and Caicos trip, the "Money Can't Buy You Class" singer snapped. "She lunged at Carole, screaming 'How dare you?'" reveals a show source. One week after the 12-hour session (set to air as specials in August), Radziwill was still peeved. "If 'elegance is learned,'" she told Us, quoting the 50-year-old's 2010 song, "then she needs to go back to school!"

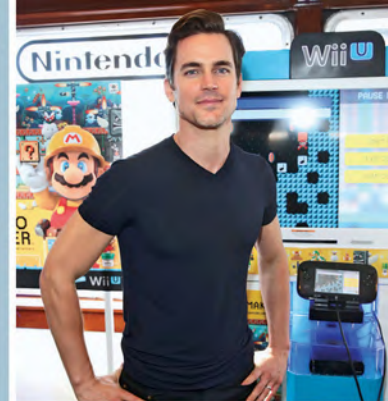

THEY SET THE DATE!

Sofia Vergara, 43, and Joe Manganiello, 38, will carve a special memory this Thanksgiving season: Sources reveal the pair of one year will wed November 22 at Florida's Breakers Palm Beach resort. The 140-acre ocean-front property can accommodate up to 800 guests (at $325 a head!). That's perfect for the Colombia native's large brood. "They want all their family and friends there," says a source. "It'll be the most fun wedding ever!"

Boxes at Bobbi's House

» While Bobbi Kristina Brown spends her final days at a Duluth, Georgia, hospice, her aunt and co-legal guardian Pat Houston, 55, has begun letting go. The sister-in-law of Brown's late mom, Whitney Houston, recently cleaned out the 22-year-old's townhouse in nearby Roswell. "She kept pictures and Whitney's platinum and gold album plaques," says a source close to Brown, who was found facedown in her bathtub January 31. "But she threw everything else out."

Manzo (in Vera Wang) wanted a "princess gown."

LAUREN & VITO Garden State Wedding

Lauren Manzo is no bridezilla. "I just want everyone to have fun," the 27-year-old told Us before her July 18 nuptials to Vito Scalia. And where else to celebrate but at the Brownstone? After a church ceremony in NYC, 400 guests trekked to her dad's event space in Paterson, New Jersey, for an all-out bash (luxé touches: raw bars and hand-rolled cigars). A sit-down dinner of Chilean sea bass followed, then a band played disco and '90s hits. Guests partied until 3 A.M. Says Manzo, "I don't think there was one moment when the dance floor wasn't full!"

Safety first! Brad Falchuk got handsy while slathering sun-block on Gwyneth Paltrow's rear in Positano, Italy, July 12.

The display was a rare sight for the usually private couple. But after nearly a year of dating, the producer, 44, and actress, 42, "seem more serious," reveals a source close to the mom of Apple, 11, and Moses, 8. "He has definitely met her kids and they like him." After all, there is much to admire about the Glee cocreator. Says the pal, "Brad is just a warm, low-key guy. He makes her feel really special."

"She loves being in love again," says a source.

The duo (in L.A. July 15) began dating in April.

Seattle Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson knows Ciara is quite the catch. "She's one of a kind," he recently said of the mom of Future, 14 months. And since meeting through a mutual friend this spring, the NFL star, 26, says he and the "Body Party" singer, 29, "have been talking every day." And taking it slowly by agreeing to stay celibate. "If you can really love somebody without that," the devout Christian has said, "then you can really love somebody."

BLAKE

Calls It Quits

After fights about kids and her jealous spying, Shelton divorces Miranda Lambert

BY SARAH GROSSBART

Life as one half of country music's reigning power couple isn't always the stuff love ballads are made of. That's the lesson Miranda Lambert learned in her first two years of marriage to Blake Shelton.

"Being on opposite sides of the country and traveling and all that . . . you go through hard stuff together," she confessed to Us at the April 2013 ACM Awards. Still, the "Somethin' Bad" singer never wavered in her belief that the two were in it for the long haul. "When all of this is said and done, we will be drinking a beer together on a front porch somewhere," she said. As she told Us, "I always say, 'Divorce is not an option.'"

At least, it wasn't for her. On July 10, Shelton filed for divorce in his native Oklahoma. Ten days later, he and his bride announced the end of their four-year marriage, in a statement: "It is with heavy hearts that we move forward separately." It was a division tabloids had been predicting almost from the moment Lambert, a two-time Grammy winner, 31, and her man, 39, swapped vows in a lantern-lit Texas barn in 2011. After all, the roguish Voice mentor had been plagued by rumors of infidelity for years. But it was his desire to be a family man — not a ladies' man — that was their ultimate downfall. "They split over kids — he wanted them and she didn't," says a source close to the couple. "Blake was dying to start a family, but she kept putting it off and coming up with excuses. Kids were the main issue."

“YOU GO THROUGH THE HARD STUFF TOGETHER, AND THOSE ARE THE MOMENTS THAT ACTUALLY COUNT. THE REST IS JUST FLUFF.”

LAMBERT TOLD US IN 2013

But not the only one. The couple also bickered over Lambert's constant jealousy (she's copped to reading his texts and direct messages on Twitter) and the fact that they were rarely in the same state. Though Lambert told Us in 2012 that they made it a point not to spend more than two weeks apart, "they never saw each other," says a source. "That made things worse." By July 20, their collaboration was officially through. Explains a Lambert insider, "Since they have a prenup and both agreed, it went through swiftly." Quickly, sure, but not without a healthy dose of heartbreak. "This was a difficult decision for both of them," says the insider. "It's a very hard time."

D FAMILY FEUD

The pair weren't always at odds about starting a family. When the Texas-born beauty and the Oklahoma-bred charmer wed in front of 550 guests at a 125-acre ranch, neither was eager to rush into parenthood. The NBC star — known for his tendency to drink-and-tweet such musings as, "Going on live national television tonight. . . . Drunk," — told Us in 2010, "I think I've got a lot of growing up to do before I start raising kids. If there's an announcement that's made in the next year or so that we're having a baby, I can promise you it's not going to have been planned!"

By 2012, though, he started envisioning life as a parent. That March, he gushed to Us that his wife was already a top-notch mom to rescue pups Waylon, Cher, Delta Dawn, Jessi, Black Betty, Virginia Bluebell and Delilah. "If she's anything with an actual human being like she is with dogs, the kid's gonna be golden," he said. "It's going to be spoiled."

Soon, says a source, Shelton began floating the idea of cutting back on work commitments so they could raise a family at their 1,200-acre Tishomingo, Oklahoma, ranch — a place Lambert once described as "where we'll be rockin' in a rockin' chair when we're 85." (They also own a residence in Nashville; see box, page 44.) Explains a source, "Blake's grown more mature and isn't partying the same way." Another insider adds that the Country Music Association's reigning Male Vocalist of the Year has had his fill of fame. "He was ready to leave The Voice, come home and settle down," says the source. "He told Miranda that he would give that up for her to start a family."

But Lambert — eight years Shelton's junior — wasn't as eager to relinquish the life of a country music star. "Her career took off huge after they were married," a source says of Lambert, who has nabbed the Academy of Country

Between her successful music career and her Oklahoma-based businesses — she opened her Pink Pistol boutique in 2012, followed by the Ladysmith, an eight-room bed-and-breakfast — “she wasn’t ready to settle down,” says the source. Echoes another insider, “She didn’t want to stay home and be a wife and a mom yet, but Blake didn’t want to be an old father.” The insider says that when they tied the knot, they each agreed that kids were in their five-year plan: “Miranda said she’d be ready by now, but she kept pushing it off. Blake had enough.”

▶ SHORT LEASH

Jealousy was another hot-button issue. Lambert is very familiar with her guy’s off-the-charts charisma. Even though Shelton was still with wife Kaynette Williams when she met him at CMT’s 100 Greatest Duets Concert in 2005, Lambert admits she fell hard. (“I knew he was married,” she has said of the moment. “I knew better, like, this is off-limits.”) And his well-earned rep as a ladies’ man — he once joked of Voice costar Christina Aguilera’s, er, assets, “They deserve their own chair,” and all but drooled over fellow guest Scarlett Johansson during a 2012 appearance on The Tonight Show With Jay Leno — did little to assuage her fears. She brushed off reports of his infidelity publicly (after

Divvying Up Properties and Pets

» While the divorce has been tough on the duo, dividing up the assets has “been very easy,” says a Lambert source. “Everything was spelled out in the prenup.” The conditions: Lambert received their Nashville residence, while Shelton will keep the 1,200-acre hunting lodge in Tishomingo, Oklahoma. Their pets, however, are their most precious possessions. The Platinum singer has reportedly moved her camel and llama off the ranch. Says the Lambert source, “She will keep the horses he bought her, and he will keep his own. And she will keep most of the dogs that were hers.”

one tabloid accused him of cheating with then-23-year-old up-and-coming musician Cady Groves, she tweeted, “Can’t wait to read if we make it or not”) but, sources say, privately the chatter gnawed at her. “She would question him at times and ask about certain girls,” says one source. “The rumors were hard for her to hear.”

To combat her insecurities, Lambert made it a point to log in to his Twitter account and read any direct messages. “I like to see who he is following,” she told Us in 2012. “They are all hot girls!” His cellphone was also an open book. “Either one of us can always look at each other’s phone, and we know each other’s passcode,” Lambert, the daughter of two private investigators, explained to Redbook. “I don’t have to snoop anymore. It just takes the question out of the marriage.” A source says she also enlisted pals to play detective: “She had spies everywhere. He was never left alone. She was jealous and so controlling of him.”

Of course, Lambert preferred to do the spying herself. Whenever possible, says a source, she would spend time on The Voice’s L.A. set — she even appeared as a guest mentor on his team in 2012. “She wanted to keep an eye on him,” says one source. Adds another, “She trusts him but knows how flirty he can be.”

But as the couple’s careers grew more successful,

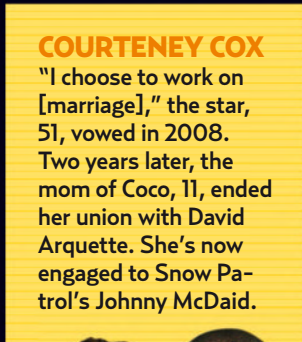

'DIVORCE IS NOT AN OPTION!'

Does that sentiment spell doom? Yes, for these stars and their exes

JENNIE GARTH

The mom of three, 43, dismissed talk in 2008: “I’m not interested in taking the easy way out.” By 2012, husband Peter Facinelli filed papers — and they each got engaged this spring.

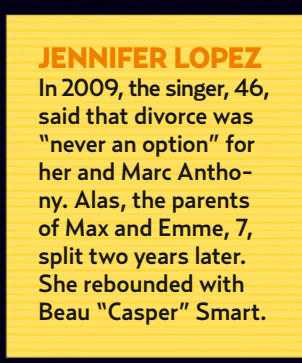

COURTENEY COX

“I choose to work on [marriage],” the star, 51, vowed in 2008. Two years later, the mom of Coco, 11, ended her union with David Arquette. She’s now engaged to Snow Patrol’s Johnny McDaid.

EVA LONGORIA

The actress, 40 (now dating José Antonio Bastón), said she and Tony Parker had a running joke before they called it off in January 2011: “I will kill him before I divorce him.”

JENNIFER LOPEZ

In 2009, the singer, 46, said that divorce was “never an option” for her and Marc Anthony. Alas, the parents of Max and Emme, 7, split two years later. She rebounded with Beau “Casper” Smart.

it became harder for Lambert to play watchdog. For the past 13 months, she has been crisscrossing the country, supporting her Grammy-winning Platinum album, while Shelton is committed to filming The Voice in Los Angeles “seven to eight months out of the year,” says a Lambert insider. “The rest of the year he is touring, recording or working on endorsements and everything. They were apart a lot.” Indeed, in the past six months, the pair have only been photographed in public together twice: at the Grammys in February and the ACM Awards two months later. “Distance was a major factor,” admits the insider. “They were rarely together.”

■ SINGING THE BLUES

Now the couple are struggling to cope with their split while remaining in the spotlight. A ringless Lambert cried while performing in Cheyenne, Wyoming, July 18. “Miranda is very heartbroken, sad and confused,” says a Lambert insider.

And while Shelton, wearing his ring, put on a good show during a July 19 Nascar appearance at the New Hampshire Motor Speedway, “he’s really broken up over this,” says a source of the Voice star, currently filming season 9. “Just devastated.” Still, a source close to the couple says his anguish could have one upside: “At least it will make for some incredible music.”

WILL LOSE THE

Kourtney Kardashian fumes about Disick's partying

BY BRAD WITTER

Kourtney Kardashian took it as a sign of progress. After a monthlong alcohol and drug bender from France to Florida, Scott Disick had canceled a paid club appearance at Harrah's in Atlantic City and returned to L.A. July 15. That night, Kardashian allowed her ex-boyfriend his first visit in more than a month with their kids, Mason, 5, Penelope, 3, and Reign, 7 months. While she was at the ESPY Awards, Disick "played with the kids for several hours" in their $8.5 million Calabasas, California, home, says a source. "It was emotional."

The playdate, however, did little to change his mind-set. While his former love took their brood to the Santa Barbara Zoo the next day, Disick, 32, hosted a raucous party at his $3.2 million Beverly Hills bachelor pad. "For the first time in nine years, he can do what he wants," reasons a source close to Disick, adding that friends are concerned for his well-being. Kardashian — who dumped Disick after seeing photos of him groping ex-girlfriend Chloé Bartoli over the July 4 weekend — is enraged.

Kardashian took kids Mason and Penelope to lunch in Calabasas, CA, July 19.

SCOTT KIDS?

The 36-year-old mom “knows how important it is to have Scott around the kids,” explains a Disick insider. “But he’s not a fit parent right now.” Adds a family source, “She realizes it would be a lot to cut him off. But she’s threatened it.”

► LORD OF THE HIGHS

The morning of July 16, Disick phoned a Brazilian-born beauty he met at a club this spring “and invited her over for a small party,” says an insider. When she and her friend arrived that afternoon, Disick “was wearing a silk robe and was high out of his mind,” a source says of the three-time rehab vet. Inside, music producer Mally Mall, 30, was holding court with, as one Disick pal puts it, the “Maybach limo full of girls” he had brought. As the day went on, the group ventured to the pool — and “He’s spending all his money on private planes, drugs, liquor, girls,” says a source close to Disick (in L.A. last October).

Babes on parade: Disick hosted multiple women at his Beverly Hills pad July 16.

one girl emerged out front barefoot, wearing a man's robe. Adds the source, "Some people were doing drugs."

Disick's weekend continued with another gathering — this time at a friend's Malibu pad July 19 — and an offer to appear at Las Vegas' 1 Oak nightclub July 24. "He's in an unstable place — pills, partying," says a Disick friend. Another pal is more blunt: "Scott's lost it. He doesn't care about anything anymore."

► CUSTODY AT STAKE

The Keeping Up With the Kardashians star is determined to shield her children from Dad's continuing spiral. She first met with attorneys the weekend of July 4 about options. (Sources tell Us the unmarried parents do not have a legal custody arrangement.) And his behavior may spur her to action. Should she pursue full custody, says an insider, "Scott's friends don't think he'll challenge Kourtney." His chances of winning would be minimal. "Using drugs and alcohol could impact Scott's ability to parent and his likelihood of gaining custody," NYC family lawyer Steven J. Mandel speculates to Us.

Kardashian (with son Reign in L.A. July 16) "is leaning on her sisters," says a Kardashian source.

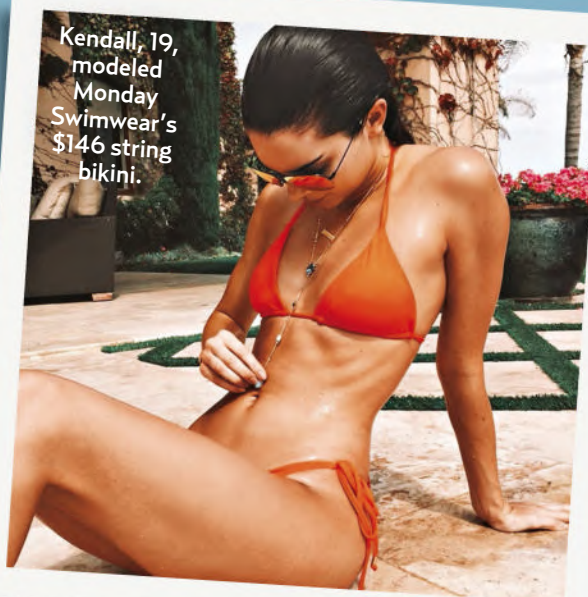

"The extent of his partying would be taken into account to make sure the kids are protected."

In the end, though, Kardashian's past may influence her future. With Disick's father and her own dad, Robert Kardashian, both deceased, she "doesn't want the kids growing up without a man to look up to," says a close source. "She wants a strong male figure in their life." US

Bristowe (on the July 27 finale) says she's ready for kids!

Bended Knee, DROVEN DROKEN HEART

Bachelorette Kaitlyn Bristowe delivers the ultimate rejection to one finalist — as he's proposing marriage! BY ERIC ANDERSSON

Kaitlyn Bristowe's robust signature laugh went silent in May. The fun-loving star of The Bachelorette recently confessed to Us she was "emotionally drained, confused and lost" in the high-stakes days before she taped the show's finale. Over the previous eight weeks, the Vancouver, British Columbia, dance instructor had endured quite the thorny season as contestants stormed off (good riddance, Ian Thomson!) and popped up unannounced (hello, Nick Viall!). And though she finally whittled down a pool of 26 guys to two potential husbands — bitter rivals Shawn Booth, a sweet but stubborn personal trainer, and smooth software sales exec Viall — Bristowe still couldn't decide between them. Noting that she had two "good guys" still standing, host Chris Harrison tells Us the Bachelorette nearly drove herself crazy: "I was like, 'You're a mess!'"

By the time the finale wrapped, she was no longer the one in turmoil. Us can confirm that Bristowe accepts a marriage proposal from one of the two suitors and is now blissfully engaged. (So as not to spoil the outcome, Us is not naming the winner, who will be revealed on the July 27 finale of the ABC dating show.) But before she said yes to him at the Bachelor mansion in Agoura Hills, California, she let the runner-up get painfully close to his own proposal! After the hopeful No. 2 professed his love on bended knee, Bristowe, 30, mercifully cut him loose. Says a show insider, "It's heart-wrenching and dramatic."

► KAITLYN'S DILEMMA

Choosing either Booth, 28, or Viall, 34, meant letting the other one go, and Bristowe dreaded that conversation. "My emotions are so intense with two people," she lamented on the July 13 episode. "When I think about saying goodbye to one of the two I have left, I don't know how to do it."

Let's just say it wasn't her best moment. As the runner-up approached Bristowe in the candlelit courtyard one May evening, the insider says, he was confident she'd soon be wearing the Neil Lane engagement ring he carried in his pocket. "He started his speech and got emotional a few seconds in," says the Bachelorette insider. "Kaitlyn grabbed his hand and let him keep going, and he thought that was the sign he needed to propose."

So, following tradition, he dropped to one knee and declared his feelings. Finally Bristowe cut him off. "She told him they have something special and she loves him," says the show insider. "But she said her heart was with someone else." Crushed, he nonetheless said he respected her decision. As he prepared to leave, Bristowe then pleaded with him to stay and talk. "He was like, 'What the f--k?'" says the source. "He told her, 'I need to go, and you need to go be with the other person.' There was nothing left to say."

▶ TORN BETWEEN TWO

That lonely walk back inside was one he'd never expected to take. "Everything was perfect," says the show insider, "and then it wasn't." Indeed, in the final weeks of production,

"Happy" Bristowe naturally found herself at Disneyland in Anaheim, CA, July 10.

Bristowe had given both men indications that they would end up on top. “I don’t know if you know how much I really care about this relationship and where it goes,” she told Booth during an intimate Killarney, Ireland, date on the July 6 episode. The next week, when Viall told Bristowe “I love you” after she met his family, she replied, “Promise?”

Harrison insists Bristowe wasn’t leading on both men; she was genuinely deadlocked. “Nick and Kaitlyn just have this thing,” Harrison tells Us. “It’s an undeniable connection. With Shawn, from the minute he got out of the limo, they’ve had this amazing romance. You can tell she deeply loves him.”

■ BIG DOUBTS

But as much as she cared for both men, she had reasons to question a future with each. Take Chicago’s Viall, who shocked Bristowe — and her 11 remaining suitors — when he showed up in NYC on the June 15 episode and asked to join the show midcourtship. As Us previously reported, the two had met through social media last winter, before she was named the Bachelorette, and engaged in “explicit” sexual FaceTime chats, texts and phone calls, according to a Viall source. That intense chemistry carried over on screen, and the two slept together on the June 22 episode. As Bristowe admitted on-air, “I just get caught up in this world when I’m with Nick.”

Therein lay the problem. Bristowe recently told Us she feared their chemistry was their strongest bond. “Did I see a lifetime with him? Or did I just see [when] he’s like, ‘I’m going to show you affection and throw you against the wall and kiss you,’ and I’m like, ‘Ohh, that’s hot!’”

Booth also ran hot — when it came to his temper, at least. Early on in the competition, Bristowe told the Connecticut native off camera he was The One — then later deemed it a mistake. “In that moment, in that time, like, that’s who I could picture myself with, so I said something like, ‘Yeah, you’re it,’” Bristowe lamented on the June 29 episode. “It’s definitely a regret that I’ve had.” After that private chat, Booth’s jealousy flared when he didn’t have her full attention. “Every time I see Kaitlyn with another guy or see her kissing another guy,” he seethed on the June 22 episode, “it honestly makes me question everything.”

So much, in fact, that he nearly quit the show. “He absolutely thought about leaving,” confirms a show source. His wavering commitment shook Bristowe, making her examine their potential marriage more closely. “I see a life with Shawn,” she told Us at the July 11 The Men Tell All taping, “but is he going to walk away from this because he can’t handle it?”

■ HAPPY ENDINGS

In the 10 weeks since his humiliating rejection, the runner-up has come to terms with how the ending played out. “There’s a lot of sadness, but he has moved on,” says the show insider, who confirms the jilted guy and Bristowe have not seen each other or spoken. “There has been zero communication.”

Bristowe is focused on the future. As with past Bachelorette couples, she and her guy have been keeping their relationship under wraps (and meeting in secret!) until they can publicly debut à deux at the postfinale After the Final Rose special. Bristowe is anxiously counting down the days until she can introduce her fiancé. The wait, however, is worth it. As she tells Us, “I’m so happy!”

Nilsson says she and Toops will remain “great friends.”

BRADY & BRITT Inside the Split

» Over The Bachelorette’s closing credits June 8, Britt Nilsson cooed of Brady Toops, “I’m proud to call him my boyfriend.” But in real life, the L.A. waitress, 28, and the Nashville country singer, 34 — who eliminated himself to pursue Nilsson after his fellow suitors voted Kaitlyn Bristowe as the Bachelorette — had already split. “We had a wonderful, sweet, and life-giving relationship that I appreciated, learned from and thoroughly enjoyed,” Nilsson wrote on Instagram July 17 of their two months together. Still, a source insists the two were never serious: “Britt went out with him, but wasn’t into it.”

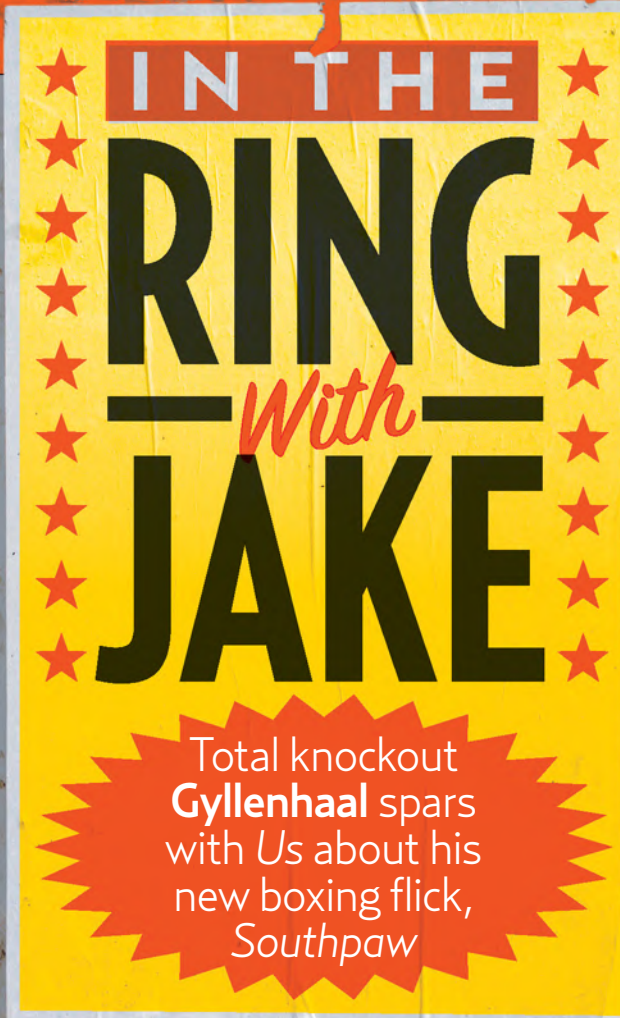

After filming his final scene as Billy Hope, a boxer on the ropes following his wife's death, Jake Gyllenhaal was punchy. "I had prosthetics on my face, and I just tore them off like Arnold Schwarzenegger tears off his face in Total Recall," says the 34-year-old Los Angeles native. "Then I went home and slept for, like, 14 hours." He was due for a rest: The single, 6-foot actor had spent five months working out twice a day to build 15 pounds of muscle for the gritty drama Southpaw (out now). "Fear was a big motivator," he jokes. "Fear of looking like an idiot!" He goes a few rounds with Us' Ingrid Meilan.

What was a typical day of training for you?

The first part of the day, I'd go on a really long run. About six weeks out, I was doing 8 miles, and then we'd go into the gym. Early on, it was just about technique. It took me months to learn how to jab and do footwork — that was a pain. Even the techniques of getting on a heavy [punching] bag or a speed bag took months.

Was it nerve-racking to finally get in the ring?

When [director] Antoine [Fuqua] told me he was going to shoot it like real HBO/Showtime fights — that we weren't going to be pulling any punches, so to speak — I thought, Well, there's no real way to cheat here. That's one of the great things about my job:

I got to learn a new skill that I never would have and learn about a world I never would have. I fell in love with boxing.

Were you actually getting punched in the face?

I didn't have a stunt double. By the time we started shooting, I had sparring enough — I mean, it was different [in practice] when I was wearing protection. But I remember, as soon as all the real guys were there — we had real refs in the ring, real HBO fight cameramen — you don't want to be "the actor" who's just trying to protect himself. If you get hurt, you get hurt.

How did you create a sense of family with your onscreen wife, Rachel McAdams, and daughter, Oona Laurence?

We'd go out on excursions. Rachel's very organized, so she'd find things around Pittsburgh, where we were shooting. She found this science museum. We saw this terrifying IMAX movie about the universe — terrifying for me. I don't even know what it was! Rachel and I wanted honesty between us and something that really felt like years of history. Sometimes just a gesture between two people lets you, as an audience, feel that these people have history. And the same thing with Oona. I think movies tend to turn parent-child relationships into fluffy cliché things. The parents I know in my life, the children I know — it's a tough job being a parent!

At one point, Oona hits you. How did you get her mad enough to go through with it?

That scene is heartbreaking. We spent tons of time together so I could get Oona frustrated with me. You want that frustration, you want the reality of the relationship. Love is about all that stuff.

Are you still boxing?

I'll go to the boxing gym and I'll get bummed when I learn something new. I think, Aww, I could have put that in the movie! US

“My job is incredible — and a bit ridiculous — but it allows me to see the world in a different way. I’ve learned so much.”

FIDDY'S FIGHT CLUB

» 50 Cent was just trying to help a friend. Actress La La Anthony had seen Gyllenhaal prepping at her gym and, wanting in on the flick, asked the rapper to call director Fuqua. “We were playing phone tag,” 50 Cent tells Us. “And when we finally talked, he said, ‘Yeah, we want you to come down and read for [Billy Hope’s backstabbing promoter] Jordan Mains.’ I was like, Me?” Anthony didn’t land a role, but the self-professed “passionate” boxing fan, 40, did. And now the executive producer of Starz’s Power and Fuqua are developing a television series based on Hope!

Costar 50 Cent boxed when he was a preteen.

CARA'S NEXT ACT

Supermodel Delevingne struts onto the big screen

Turns out all of those fashion and beauty campaigns were just stepping stones for supermodel Cara Delevingne. "When I was 5 ... I knew I would be an actress," says the 22-year-old. Cut to Paper Towns (out July 24), a romantic drama based on the John Green bestseller, in which she stars as an unattainable It Girl. Get used to seeing those brows on screen — the Brit has four more films out in 2015. "Acting makes me want to get up in the morning," she says. "I take it seriously." She talks to Us.

Q: This is your first big film. Was it difficult to prove you were right for the role?

It was important that John saw me as Margo. I'll put my blood, sweat and tears into acting and get that character right. So I just worked hard and hoped for the best.

Q: Nat Wolff plays your love interest, and you're both musicians. Did you two jam?

We broke into song while filming. I also built a recording studio in my apartment, and we played around in there.

Q: Music, acting ... Are you through with modeling?

I'm not quitting. I'm just doing it a lot less because I film until next September.

Q: Margo pulls tweetworthy pranks. Spill: Do you too?

In [high] school, I used to buy henna pens and draw penises on people's faces at night!

"We got on really well," she says of costar Wolff (right).

"Nobody truly knows who they are," she says. "Life is about making mistakes and learning."

The MTV star says Bentley is "in love" with his sister.

A Teen Mom's Tough Journey

Maci Bookout fires off her life story in a new memoir. She gives Us a sneak peek!

Writing a book was a teenage dream for Maci Bookout. "It's always been on my bucket list," the Teen Mom OG star, 23, explains to Us. Her first book, Bulletproof, details the dramas that occurred on camera (she jokes that baby-daddy Ryan Edwards "might not like" a few passages) and off (she dumped ex Kyle King after she caught him flirting with girls on Facebook!). She also shares her unfiltered experience raising Bentley, now 6.

Bulletproof is out now ($15, amazon.com).

"People said, 'You make it look so easy!'" she says. "I wanted to show that it was difficult."

LAST CHAPTER Now the Tennessee marketing specialist has a new camera-ready reality with her "cute as can be" newborn, Jayde, and love Taylor McKinney, 26. "It was meant to be," she says of their three-year romance. "Life was such hard work for so long. Now I can just relax and enjoy it."

PIXEL'S TOUGH VIDEO GIRL

Game on! Michelle Monaghan talks battling aliens and bad hair with Us

» Growing up in Iowa, Michelle Monaghan was a serious arcade junkie. "I'd get a dollar and spend my four quarters wisely," she recalls of her joystick days. Today the actress is putting her skills to use in the comedy Pixels (out now), playing a colonel who helps save the world from aliens disguised as classic video-game characters. The 39-year-old mom of Willow, 6, and Tommy, 21 months (with graphic-artist husband Peter White), racks up points with Us.

SHE'S A TOP PLAYER "I got to put my initials in [the high-score list] of Pac-Man a few times. But I came from a small town, so there wasn't much competition."

SHE BONDED WITH THE CAST

"Adam Sandler, Peter Dinklage and Josh Gad are my favorite dudes. We barbecued on the weekends.... I got to boss them around."

SHE MADE PIXELS FOR HER FAMILY

"My kids don't know what I do because they've never seen me on TV! Making a family movie was definitely something I wanted."

SHE HAS '80S STYLE REGRETS

"I did not learn my lesson about getting perms the first, second, third or fourth time. I have so much hair, so it was big! Don't do any research, please."

"He did a lot of improv," she says of costar Sandler.

FIVE TOP ABS MOVES TO STEAL

Bikini season is in session! Prep for the beach with these star-tested (and approved!) toners

Overhead Toss With Rotation

Khloé Kardashian is all about stomach pics after workouts with Gunnar Peterson. His tip: Sit with bent knees and throw a medicine ball against a wall. Catch the ball, bring it to your side and rotate your torso. Do 12 reps per side.

Double Leg Stretch

Here's a staple in Kate Hudson's sessions with Nicole Stuart: Lie on your back, pull knees in, keep head and shoulders lifted. Using your abs, extend arms overhead and legs out. Circle arms around. Repeat 10 times.

Dumbbell Ab Reach

George King keeps Kaley Cuoco's tummy taut with weights. Lie on your back and hold a 3- to 8-pound dumbbell. Keep it in your right hand, bring your torso off the ground and reach for the left leg. Do four sets of 10 per side.

The Teaser

This move — a favorite of Jessica Alba's guru Jennifer "JJ Dancer" Johnson — "activates all of the abdominal muscles," says Johnson. Lie on the floor, arms extended above the head, then lift your legs to a 45-degree angle. Exhale and, using your core, raise your head and shoulders up into a V position. Inhale and return to start. Do 10 reps; work up to 20.

High-Five Plank

Get into a plank position facing your partner. (Gisele Bündchen, left, chose trainer Jill Payne.) Raise your left leg and right arm, then give your pal a high five! (Be sure to keep your butt down the whole time.) Try 12 on each side.

No data proves the antiagers harm a fetus, says NYC dermatologist Ava Shamban. Still, she suggests erring on the side of caution with a plant-based antioxidant such as vitamin C. It mimics the smoothing effects of the animal-derived vitamin A powerhouse.

What's the Best ACNE REMEDY?

Hormones can exacerbate breakouts, but prescription acne medication such as isotretinoin should be avoided, as studies have linked it to birth defects. Shamban's antidote: a salicylic acid wash and alpha hydroxy acid lotion. Both topical ingredients unclog pores without posing a risk to baby.

OPENS FRIDAY 7/24

Southpaw

Gyllenhaal doesn't want his daughter to watch him fight.

A buff Jake Gyllenhaal is down for the count in a predictable boxing drama

With his sinewy torso and Hulk-like biceps, Jake Gyllenhaal's physical commitment to this role is unbelievable. But he can only do so much heavy lifting in a grim, utterly trite melodrama. He plays a raised-on-the-streets boxer named Billy Hope. Just to reiterate: His last name is Hope. Anyway, Billy is a lightweight champ with a supportive wife (Rachel McAdams), daughter, entourage and mansion. After the missus is tragically killed, he loses all of the above. Yes, even his precocious daughter inexplicably gets sent away to public housing. In order to reclaim his life and his good name, he must start at the bottom. By round 4 — around the time he takes a menial job at a dingy NYC gym — we know exactly where this redemption story is heading. Indeed, director Antoine Fuqua (The Equalizer) is so intent on showing Billy's brutal struggle that he forgoes narrative originality. (All that's missing from the back-in-the-game training montage is the sight of Billy running up steps to a museum.) It's also difficult to invest in Billy's plight because Gyllenhaal plays him as a mumbling, depressed enigma. We want to cheer for him in the ring, yet by the end of the browbeating 123 minutes, the cause just feels so . . . hopeless.

At first, Phoenix tries to resist falling for Stone.

OUT NOW

Irrational Man

In the mighty impressive Woody Allen oeuvre, this film will not go down as a classic. So enjoy it as a delectable summer treat. Joaquin Phoenix is the mysterious philosophy professor to Emma Stone's smitten, whip-smart student. Their relationship swerves after Phoenix plots to murder a stranger because he thinks the guy deserves to die — and he's convinced he won't get caught. But the wide-eyed Stone, doing her best Nancy Drew, is on to him. This is a comedy, by the way. And the stars' May-August chemistry shines through the film's more familiar moments (Allen has long ruminated on themes of luck and consequences). It's a shame that their sparkling rapport has to end.

Jill Scott

Woman

No use trying to shut up Jill Scott.

The neo-soul chanteuse is as expressive as her Twitter feed in her spirit-enriching fifth studio set. On "Run Run Run," a handclap-salted piece of Philly soul, she's a working woman hustling to "put food on the table." Then, in the funky-up "Closure," Scott has second thoughts about cooking her man breakfast after makeup sex, instead snidely asking, "Would you mind leaving out the back door?" #Harsh. (Atlantic)

"I'm gonna be superfine," Scott sings in "Prepared," a slow jam akin to 2001's "The Way."

FRIDAY 7/31

Wet Hot American Summer: First Day of Camp

Bradley Cooper, Amy Poehler and Paul Rudd all gamely reunite in this prequel series to their 2001 cult flick, a 1980s-set sex-comedy satire. The stars reprise their roles as teenage (!) camp counselors, and that's just the beginning of the delirious fun. The laughs come easy as camp staffers

Jason Schwartzman (a welcome addition) and Janeane Garofalo investigate a toxic-waste spill that involves Ronald Reagan (Michael Showalter) and a government assassin (Jon Hamm). Add in Kristen Wiig as a trampy preppy, and the result is one hot farce. (Netflix, all eight episodes available)

Appleby is unfaithful to Josh Kelly.

MONDAY 7/27

UnReal

Watching The Bachelor will never be the same after seeing this surprise hit. (Latecomers: It goes behind the scenes of fictional dating show Everlasting in juicy, cynical fashion.) In the latest credible display of showbiz sleaze, producer Rachel (Shiri Appleby) continues to prod the show's star, Adam (Freddie Stroma), to pick a fan favorite as the winner in exchange for a spinoff. Yet it's Rachel's own self-destructive way with men (she's a two-timer) that feels most raw and real. (Lifetime, 10 P.M.)

Richie expects big-bucks offers.

WEDNESDAY 7/29

Candidly Nicole

Nicole Richie's reality sendup, a featherlight treat, returns to spoof her entitled image. In season 2 she bands with friend Jamie Schneider to develop a Siri-like app that expresses honest feelings ("That baby is butt-ass ugly!") on behalf of users. Richie is especially droll pitching the contraption as a necklace to a Shark Tank investor. "Our projected sales are that everyone is just going to love it," she lazily asserts. This woman deserves her own big-screen screwball comedy. (VH1, 11 P.M.)

ON THIS WEEK

SUNDAY 7/26 CELEBRITY FAMILY FEUD

Survey says this is one epic battle! Mario Lopez and his wife's family aim to beat Joey Lawrence and his brothers in order to snag $25,000 for the charities of their choice. Steve Harvey hosts. (ABC, 8 P.M.)

SUNDAY 7/26 ANSWERED PRAYERS

Touched by a real angel? Roma Downey hosts (and produces with husband Mark Burnett) this look at people who survived a tragedy thanks to, they believe, divine intervention. First, Indiana mom Trish swears a message from God saved her family from a deadly tornado. Her harrowing tale is told with interviews, news footage and reenactments. (TLC, 10 P.M.)

MONDAY 7/27 RUNNING WILD WITH BEAR GRYLLS

Kate Winslet doesn't seem like the earthworm-eating survivalist type. Yet the glam actress joins outdoorsman Bear Grylls in the rugged mountains of Wales, rappelling off cliffs and swimming in icy waters. Brrr! (NBC, 10 P.M.)

TUESDAY 7/28 FACE OFF

The competition's new season features 16 more special-effects artists (like self-taught Sidney Cumbie) battling to create wild creatures. The first task: Make an alien! (Syfy, 9 P.M.)

WEDNESDAY 7/29 LITTLE WOMEN: LA

New faces! Brittney (she and costar pal Terra Jole danced on Miley Cyrus' tour) and Orange County mom Jasmine join the reality show's clique of diminutive yet high-living ladies. (Lifetime, 9 P.M.)

WEDNESDAY 7/29 AMERICA'S BEST DANCE CREW ALL STARS

The hoofing battle reboots: T-Pain, YouTube star Frankie Grande and singer Teyana Taylor judge as favorite dance troupes from seasons past compete for a spot on a VMA special. (MTV, 11 P.M.)

FRIDAY 7/31 DESCENDANTS

Another playful Disney musical! Belle and Beast's son (Mitchell Hope) places four teen rebels — whose parents are iconic villains — in prep school together. (Disney, 8 P.M.)

Hope (left) and Dove Cameron

NEW ON VIDEO

Pals Dianna Agron (left), Kevin McHale and Naya Rivera reunite.

Glee Season 6

Don't stop believing, indeed! The final 13 episodes of the groundbreaking musical dramedy serve as a satisfying end to the series. Lea Michele stirs as McKinley High School grad Rachel, helping Will (Matthew Morrison) guide his glee club after her fizzled try for stardom. Football coach Beiste (Dot-Marie Jones) transitions to male, a story told with care. And the musical numbers: Wow. When Will and his rival, snarky Sue (Jane Lynch), duet on Abba's "The Winner Takes It All," it's Glee-licious. (Amazon Prime and Netflix)
